

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method estimates a channel impulse response in an ultra wide bandwidth (UWB) system. Multiple training sequences modulated at a chip rate are received. Each training sequence is sampled by parallel with multiple correlators at sampling rate substantially slower than the chip rate to obtain a samples over a time interval of the impulse response at a resolution substantially equal to the chip rate, and then estimating the channel impulse response from these samples.